DEAR FRIENDS,

People in Need began with a small group of friends who wanted to ease the suffering of people in times of crisis, and encourage others to become more involved in the larger world. We began in 1992 with the vision of encouraging a largeness of spirit in Czech society. Communism damaged the spirit of community in our country, and from the beginning we have worked to rebuild the fabric of our nation, while reaching beyond it to help others. This guiding principle has left its imprint on all of our projects.

Through the Relief and Development Department, we work to connect Czechs to the wider world and offer a helping hand to those who need our support. The Field Social Work Program, Variants and One World actively work to open Czech audiences to the testimony of people struggling for human rights and dignity around the world and in our own backyards. The Human Rights and Democracy Department reaches out to those oppressed in countries where basic rights seem like luxuries. These different departments work together to promote a largeness of spirit and complement each other with different approaches.

2005 brought us many new challenges and new opportunities. Old friends left the organization, including our former director Tomas Pojar. I returned to the position of director along with many new colleagues who have brought experience and enthusiasm to our headquarters and field offices. 2005 was a year of growth and development as PIN entered a new period of professionalization.

People in Need is now far from that small group of friends that began our work more than a decade and a half ago. In 2005, PIN administered projects and distributed aid with a value of almost EUR 10 900 000. We are now a large organization that owes thanks to long-term partners like Czech Television and the members of our Club of Friends. We also owe thanks to countless sponsors, donors and partners that make our work possible. I owe special thanks to the talented staff that we have around the world and at home who are embodiments of the largeness of spirit that motivates all that we do.

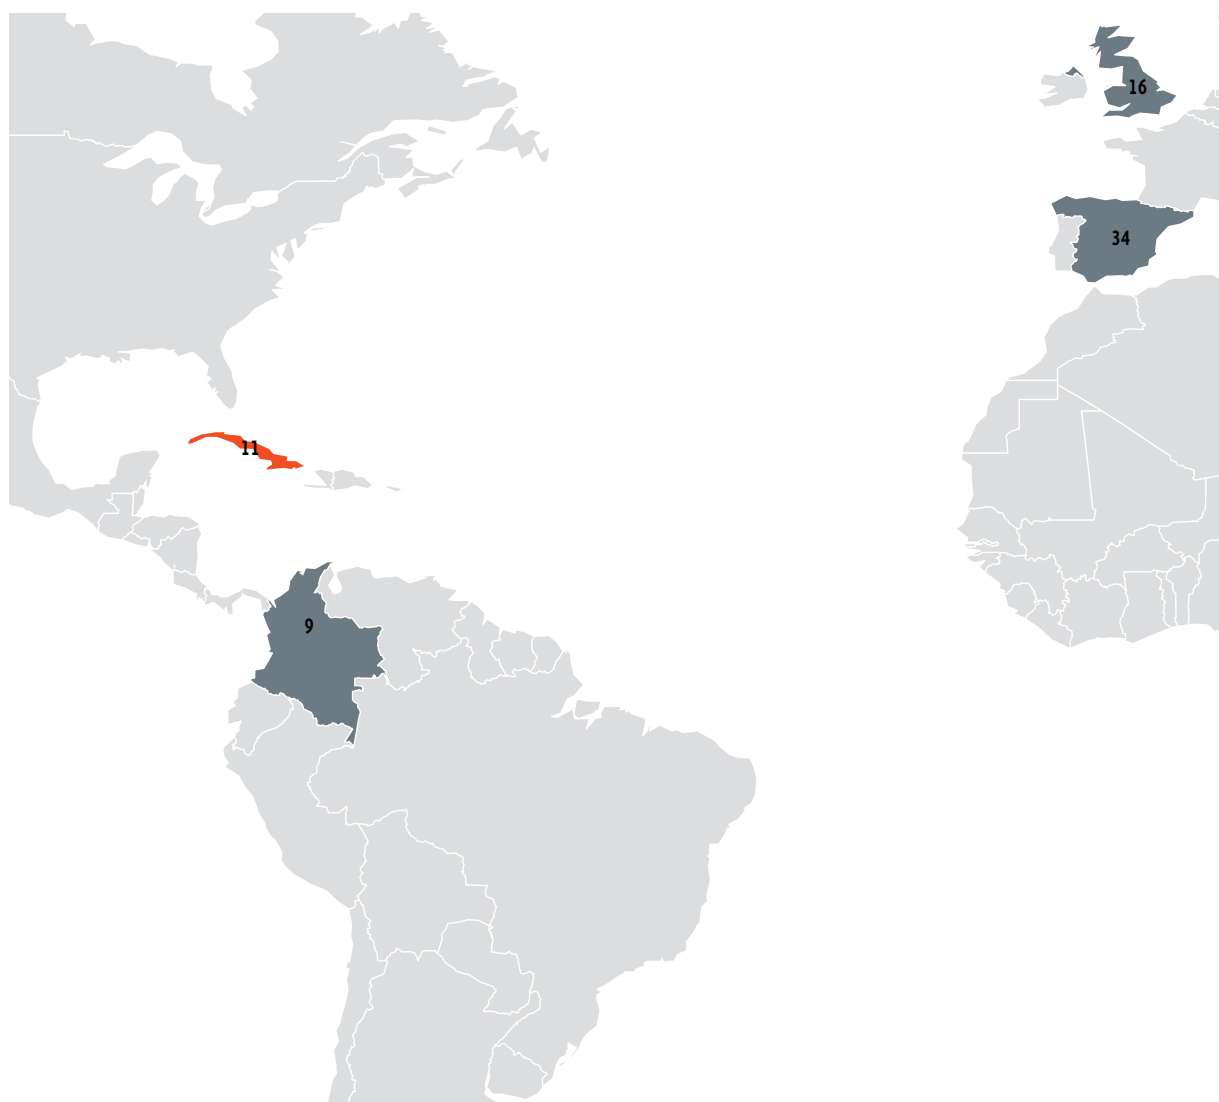

Thank you,

Šimon Pánek

RELIEF AND DEVELOPMENT

The Relief and Development Department manages projects around the world. RDD has the capacity to respond to emergencies with humanitarian assistance, and also to develop long-term projects that are aimed at stabilizing growth in areas where development has been slow to take root.

In 2005, large-scale development programs operated in both Sri Lanka and Afghanistan. In Sri Lanka, PIN is focused on post-Tsunami reconstruction in the Trincomalee region in the northeast. In Afghanistan, PIN significantly enlarged its activities, including the expansion of operations in provinces south of Kabul. In both countries, PIN's focus is on rehabilitation and long-term development.

2005 held a very different fate for PIN in Chechnya and Ingushetia. PIN's office in the region came under more and more pressure from the Russian authorities and the Russian media. Even though no specific allegations were made and no evidence was presented, the Russian authorities finally refused to renew PIN's permit to operate in the area. After five and a half years of work, and the implementation of projects worth more than EUR 20 500 000, PIN was forced to close its office in the summer of 2005.

PIN projects in Iraq were managed by expatriate staff based in Jordan that worked closely with the staff of the PIN field office in the south of Iraq. Projects in Iraq made a significant move away from material and construction activities towards the transition of society and the development of civil society in 2005. In Iran, 2005 saw PIN phase out projects in Bam, the epicenter of a major earthquake in late 2003. Reconstruction projects were completed and psycho-social and income generation projects were handed over to a local organization that PIN will continue to supervise.

A strong earthquake hit northern Pakistan in late 2005, causing a humanitarian disaster. PIN was able to generate enough funds in the Czech Republic to send immediate assistance and establish a permanent field-operation. PIN's work in Pakistan is focused on mid-term and long-term technical assistance in the affected region.

PIN offices in Serbia, Romania, Namibia and Ethiopia continued to focus on education, psycho-social issues, health and economic development through the support of livelihood generation. In late 2005, PIN opened a new field office in Georgia, building on similar activities carried out for a second year in Armenia.

PIN owes its success in 2005 to the growing number of PIN RDD staff, their immense enthusiasm, engagement and developing expertise. The following section explains the activities of RDD in detail.

DEVELOPMENT AWARENESS

PIN began activities aimed at increasing development awareness in 2003. These activities work to inform the media, the Czech general public, select civil servants and officials about international development cooperation, official Czech development assistance and issues related to today's increasingly globalized world. PIN works to increase the quality of media coverage of development issues by educating journalists at home, through study trips to the Global South and by cooperating with a network of correspondents.

In 2005, PIN issued three supplements in major Czech dailies on development issues. The screening of documentaries, discussions and exhibitions were organized to examine issues in Mongolia, Peru, Ecuador and the problems faced by African health services. PIN also published three bulletins that contained articles on selected global issues and initiatives focused on health, education and the environment in countries of the Global South.

Activities are also aimed at increasing the awareness of Czech civil servants and decision makers. PIN provided these people with quality information on the development policy of OECD countries and international financial institutions like the IMF and the World Bank. PIN also arranged study trips to countries in the Global South for select civil servants.

In 2005, PIN published articles, analyses and news on development assistance. The web page www.ROZVOJOVKA.cz was created to serve as the first Czech information portal about development issues. PIN also published Global Issues and Development Assistance, the first manual available in the Czech Republic on development issues.

SRI LANKA

Over thirty thousand people perished and over half a million lost their homes in Sri Lanka alone following the Asian Tsunami disaster. In the days following the catastrophe, PIN witnessed an enormous outpouring of support from Czechs for victims of the tragedy. SOS Sri Lanka generated over EUR 4 500 000 in the Czech Republic, making it the largest collection for foreign intervention in PIN history.

Much of the governmental and overseas resources for assistance after the Tsunami were directed toward the southern part of the island, which is a sought-after tourist destination. For this reason, PIN assessed that the region of Trincomalee in the northeast was in greater need of assistance. Trincomalee is a region that is scarred by dozens of years of civil war between the Tamil Tigers and government forces. The extensive natural catastrophe was multiplied by the unfavorable environment in which the local people live.

The PIN program of assistance in Sri Lanka has two interconnected goals – to help people begin normal life again, and to permanently improve the living conditions in the entire targeted area. During the period immediately after the catastrophe, PIN participated in the building of provisional shelters, the construction of provisional classrooms for schools filled with refugees, and the distribution of canoes, fishing nets and other equipment to small businessmen and tradesmen. Later, assistance naturally moved in the direction of more long-term intervention: the building of permanent homes, supporting the ability of those affected by the Tsunami to make a living, the development of the school system and support for youth employment.

IMMEDIATE HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE

PIN distributed essential items in the period following the Tsunami including food stuffs, water, lamps, cooking sets and mats. In the first weeks after the disaster, more than eleven thousand people affected by the Tsunami were assisted.

ASSISTANCE IN THE TRANSITIONAL PERIOD

In cooperation with the Alliance 2015 partner, German Agro Action and the local Sri Lankan NGO Sewalanka, PIN built temporary shelters for one thousand families. PIN also helped restore power to the area, and began the process of waste and debris removal. During this period, PIN carried out projects to restore the livelihoods of affected fishermen and trades people. Job training courses were organized to give survivors needed skills in carpentry, construction, masonry work, plumbing and welding. PIN also opened ten free-time centers for children living in temporary camps.

LONG-TERM DEVELOPMENT

Later in 2005, PIN began projects aimed at the permanent rehabilitation of the affected communities. PIN built forty homes in the newly created village of Naduoothu, rebuilt two and refurbished six schools and eight kindergartens that were destroyed. PIN also conducted vocational support and offered professional training to local administrators, thus strengthening the stability of the region in the long run.

AFGHANISTAN

PIN began assisting Afghani post-war returnees in December 2001, and four years later PIN is fully focused on long-term and sustainable development. In 2005, PIN's operations experienced significant growth and expanded into the south-eastern province of Paktia.

EDUCATION

In 2005, PIN opened a teacher training institute in Samangan province, which turns out two hundred new and re-qualified teachers annually. In the district of Chohi, three schools were constructed and work began on a fourth. To date, PIN has built or reconstructed seventy-seven schools in Afghanistan, significantly improving education for tens of thousands of students. Through the training of teachers, more than one thousand provincial teachers and professors were given the opportunity to improve their professional skills.

A special emphasis was put on general literacy and the inclusion of girls in the educational process in rural areas. PIN educational projects also established and trained school boards, which will secure the operational capacity of targeted schools after the departure of NGOs.

WATER AND SANITATION

Two major projects that helped people cope with the results of a critical shortage of water, and worked to decrease child mortality and general morbidity were implemented in the drought-stricken district of Daraisuf. The programs consisted of the construction of dozens of hand dug and bore wells, a pipe scheme for the district center, hundreds of public and private latrines, operation and maintenance systems, extensive hygiene education trainings and the distribution of basic hygiene kits. Under this program, more than eight hundred water sources for more than 200 000 beneficiaries were constructed or rehabilitated.

RURAL REHABILITATION AND DEVELOPMENT

PIN also joined with the National Solidarity Program, aimed at the rehabilitation and development of small, rural infrastructure and the empowerment of local administration. New community representatives are elected and trained to administer a village development plan over three years. The final phase of the program consists of the implementation of community sub-projects, such as the construction of bridges and roads, electrification or the rehabilitation of sources of water.

In 2005, a three-year program for Kunduz River Basin Protection was launched. The project aims to change behavior towards the environment, reforestation and water management. PIN worked as one of three partners on a large educational component consisting of practical workshops on decision making and planning, effective utilization of local resources, irrigation and alternative livelihood.

The workshops were followed by smaller projects supporting local reforestation, water management and changing the patterns of local behavior.

CHECHNYA, INGUSHETIA

After five years, PIN closed its operations in the North Caucasus in 2005. PIN had been under pressure from Russian authorities, who in April 2005, denied PIN’s request to renew its accreditation. PIN was never given any formal explanation for the authorities’ decision not to extend PIN’s accreditation in the Russian Federation.

Until June 2005, PIN continued to administer projects. At the close of operations, PIN handed over a good part of its work to the Center for Humanitarian Assistance, a local NGO with whom PIN plans to continue cooperation.

In October 2005, a massive earthquake struck the northern mountainous regions of Pakistan and the northern border of India. This disaster killed eighty thousand people and left more than three million homeless. The areas most affected in Pakistan were the poor northwest and the regions of Azad Jammu and Kashmir.

A PIN employee based in Afghanistan immediately went to Pakistan to assess the extent of the damage and to prepare a plan for assistance. Many villages and towns had been completely destroyed, the infrastructure was severely paralyzed and ninety-five percent of all educational and health care facilities were in ruins. PIN released EUR 17 000 from its fast reaction fund, available thanks to donations to the Club of Friends, and announced a public collection for future funding.

In the beginning, PIN worked to help the affected survive the winter. PIN distributed winter tents, portable stoves and blankets to more than 1200 families. PIN also sent four teams of Czech health professionals immediately following the earthquake to provide emergency medical assistance to 4 200 people in temporary camps.

SPECIAL REPORT: PAKISTAN IN 2006
PIN continued assistance after the winter of 2005/2006. In early 2006, PIN was engaged in a project to remove waste and rubble from the city of Bagh. This three month project significantly improved the local living conditions following the earthquake.

In cooperation with Alliance 2015 partner German Agro Action, PIN also began a psychosocial project that will build facilities for free-time activities, set up a therapeutic program and train a team of social workers to assist the affected manage the long-term impact of the disaster.

ETHIOPIA

Access to quality education is PIN's priority in Ethiopia. PIN opened a vocational skills boarding school for HIV/AIDS orphans, where students are educated and learn skills to help them find work and support themselves and their families. A center for modern teaching methods was completed, where Czech and Ethiopian experts train teachers from several districts in south Ethiopia in cooperation with the University of Addis Ababa.

PIN and the Czech Association of Scouts held a public collection called Let's Build a School in Africa for the second year. One primary school was built, and construction of two new schools started. The project is aimed at constructing schools in Ethiopia and raising awareness of development issues in the Czech Republic.

Since 2003, PIN has worked to mitigate the impact of HIV/AIDS through the Wake Community Center and Craft Workshop in Keetmanshoop, Namibia. The workshop offers mainly local women the chance to earn a living through the production of handicrafts to be sold in the Czech Republic and in Namibia. Almost all of the workshop employees have been affected by the HIV/AIDS epidemic, either through direct infection or the infection of family members.

PIN also carried out social work projects, operated a kindergarten and ran after-school programs for children from poor families. In 2005, PIN expanded into remote rural locations, training people in techniques for the home production of cloth and handicrafts for tourists.

In 2005, PIN shifted its focus from rehabilitation and construction projects to the development of human resources. PIN staff in Iraq cooperates with expatriates in Jordan to run management training courses in both countries, serving mainly southern Iraq. PIN draws on the post-communist experience of Central and Eastern Europe in designing training courses. Most PIN training courses are held in Jordan, but are followed up with a practical component in Iraq. Journalism trainees are given a small stipend for publishing articles and civil society organizations are given micro grants to implement. PIN believes this combined approach makes the training lessons more applicable for the trainees.

IRAN

Following the December 2003 earthquake in Bam, PIN focused on sanitation programs in IDP camps. Later, PIN shifted activities to include the rehabilitation of educational and health facilities, and on work with the most affected groups.

In 2005, three new schools serving girls in the Bam region were opened, and PIN finished construction of a new clinic, the first reopened after the earthquake. Support for sport activities, mainly for girls, continued and PIN administered income-generation projects aimed at disadvantaged women. At the close of 2005, PIN had two projects remaining in Iran that were under the supervision of PIN partners on the ground.

In Armenia, PIN administered projects in the Kotayk region to help the local community increase opportunities for livelihood generation, create after-school activities and increase the involvement of the population in the development of public policy in 2005. PIN also ran vocational training and provided legal and financial consultations. An information center was set up in Yerevan that provides information on the risks of illegal immigration.

PIN began work in Georgia in 2005 aimed at empowering the local community in the Tkibuli district to play a role in sustainable development. PIN is working to encourage infrastructure investment, vocational training and business consultation. PIN is also drawing attention to the problems and risks related to illegal immigration.

ONE WORLD HUMAN RIGHTS FILM FESTIVAL

In 2005, PIN organized the seventh One World Film Festival, with more than 41 000 people attending. In addition to Prague, the festival took place in thirteen regional centers around the Czech Republic. One hundred and twenty films from around the world were presented, with screenings followed by discussions with festival guests. Apart from quality documentary films, the festival was made up of workshops, panel debates, exhibitions, accompanying musical programs and educational screenings for schools.

One World's fundamental belief is that the role of film is not just for broadcasting on television or distribution in cinemas and film festivals. A quality documentary has an exceptional potential to foster mutual understanding and openness. It can break down stereotypes, heighten public awareness about human rights and promote global responsibility.

Digital cameras, documentary films, video-activism and the new media are important democratization tools in many parts of the world. Through documentaries that unveil the realities behind the global media and an ongoing public discussion, One World operates as a forum for initiatives towards change.

One World provides films to other NGOs and organizes screenings in schools, social institutions and prisons. The festival has successfully had documentaries aired on television, and actively supports the creation of human rights orientated festivals abroad, especially in Central, Southern and Eastern Europe.

ONE WORLD IN SCHOOLS

One World in Schools uses human rights documentary film and supporting materials to educate students about tolerance and respect for the rights of others. In 2005, One World in Schools expanded beyond secondary schools and reached out to hundreds of primary schools. In order to ensure that the content quality of the project remained high as One World in Schools grew, the staff made regular evaluation trips, held sample screenings, met with a group of experts and discussed the project with participating teachers.

This research resulted in the addition of a module on the modern history of Czechoslovakia in 2005. The module was developed to address the fact that the history of Czechoslovakia after World War II is missing from the curricula of most schools. In November 2005, One World in Schools developed a project called Stories of Injustice that focused on the victims of communist injustice. Over the course of a month, 32 000 students from 370 schools attended documentary screenings and discussions with the victims of communist oppression.

In 2005, One World in Schools designed a project that aims to develop the critical thinking skills of young people, in order to help them analyze the daily influence of the media. The project works to give them the tools they need to form logical opinions and critically analyze what they are presented with through the media. Audiovisual materials are presented to the teachers to help them approach this important topic with their students.

BELARUS, MOLDOVA AND HOMO HOMINI

BELARUS AND MOLDOVA

The work that PIN does in Belarus and Moldova is based on the conviction that it has a responsibility to support groups and people peacefully working to bring democracy and human rights to countries controlled by totalitarian regimes. PIN believes that it is in the interest of the Czech Republic and the European Union to help civil society grow and facilitate democratic transformation in Belarus and Moldova.

The core of the projects in Belarus and Moldova is the exchange of information about the transformation process that brought Central Europe from communism to democracy and the free market. PIN arranges study trips and seminars for civil society activists, civil servants and other professionals aimed at sharing the lessons of transformation. To aid this process, PIN developed and translated into Belarusian a handbook on transformation written by individuals involved in the Czech process. The projects administered to strengthen civil society in Moldova are aimed at addressing corruption, the lack of political culture and activities of Transnistrian separatists.

An important part of PIN projects are monthly reviews of events in Belarus read by more than five hundred civic leaders and decision makers. PIN also provides information about developments in Moldova.

HOMO HOMINI 2005

People in Need grants the Homo Homini Award annually to an individual in recognition of his or her dedication to the promotion of human rights, democracy and non-violent solutions to political conflicts. The 2005 Homo Homini Award was given to Ales Bialacki and the Belarusian organization Viasna. Viasna is a civic initiative that defends the rights of citizens in Belarus and provides assistance to the victims of politically motivated repression. Mr. Bialacki and Viasna have carried out projects regardless of the danger and re-creminations posed by the Lukashenko regime.

SUPPORT OF CUBAN CIVIL SOCIETY

PIN has supported the work of the democratic opposition, independent journalists, doctors, librarians and other active individuals in Cuba since 1997. In 2005, PIN organized ten working trips to Cuba, which were focused on direct assistance to the families of the political prisoners arrested during the Cuban crackdown in the spring of 2003. Medication, books, information and other material support were provided, and PIN worked to share the Czech dissent experience from the time of the communist regime in Czechoslovakia. With the support of the Czech Ministry of Foreign Affairs, PIN published a book about the Czech transition from a totalitarian regime to democracy, which explains the steps of transformation. The handbook was written by individuals involved in the Czech process and was translated into Spanish.

In 2005, PIN continued in its role as the International Committee for Democracy in Cuba (ICDC) secretariat. The ICDC consists of internationally significant figures from politics and culture who work to increase international support for the Cuban democratic opposition. The ICDC aims to push nations and international organizations to adopt a mutual approach towards Castro's regime. More information about the ICDC can be found at www.icdcprague.cz.

PIN also worked to inform the Czech and international public about the situation of political prisoners in Cuba in 2005. A symbolic Cuban prison cell was set up in the center of Prague as a part of an event attended by celebrities and political figures in order to draw attention to those imprisoned in Cuba and their families.

In order to draw public attention to the fates of the families of political prisoners, PIN created a photo exhibition on the wives of Cuban political prisoners called It is Our Problem Too, which was exhibited in several European cities in 2005.

FIELD SOCIAL WORK

PIN's social work programs have been active in the Czech Republic since 1999. In 2005, the programs provided social work and assistance to the socially excluded in twenty neighborhoods in fourteen Czech cities. Most clients of the field programs are long-term unemployed, dependent on social benefits, have little or no education, and are unqualified and unsuccessful in the labor market. Many face discrimination in even looking for work. These people live in poor conditions, often in dilapidated complexes, dormitories or squats on the outskirts of cities and towns that form ghettos.

FIELD SOCIAL WORK

Field social workers provide free assistance and help clients with administrative procedures, negotiations with authorities, provide legal advice and accompany clients to court proceedings. Field social workers also help clients find employment, resolve housing issues, assist with job training and ensure that clients' children are attending school.

Over fifty field social workers, coordinators, supervisors, educators and lawyers work with PIN's field social work programs. In 2005, the programs provided almost fifteen thousand consultations to more than five thousand clients. Professional legal advice was given to over one thousand clients and PIN lawyers accompanied dozens of clients to court.

PIN also opened contact centers where clients visited during consultation days. At other times, field social workers visited clients in the clients' homes, where the social workers spent time examining the causes of the clients' downward movement into exclusion. The social worker and the client developed steps to be taken that improve the client's situation. The relationship between social worker and client is based on mutual trust and cooperation.

OTHER FIELD PROGRAM SERVICES

In Ústí nad Labem, PIN operates a community center for children. Staff and volunteers organize educational programs and after-school activities. In 2005, Ústí nad Labem, Kladno and Pilsen began at-home tutoring programs for at-risk children. Education coordinators look for areas that require special attention in order to keep the child on track. The coordinators understand both the home and school environments, and the coordinators council both tutors and teachers.

In 2005, the field social work project began a job counseling program for the socially disadvantaged. Job counselors assist clients who are motivated and able to get work, or motivate clients to search for employment. Counselors advise clients in the steps to follow when looking for employment and search for job opportunities in the region. They negotiate with labor offices in order to set up retraining courses in skills that are in demand in the labor market.

SOCIAL CAMPAIGN

In February and March 2005, People in Need, together with the BigBoard Praha company, prepared a social campaign to draw attention to the existence of ghettos of social exclusion in the Czech Republic. Likviduj! featured billboards with striking visual messages in major Czech cities, as well as along the country’s main highways. Billboards, articles, reports and advertisements were placed in the press, drawing attention to www.ceskaghetta.cz. The website featured an interactive game, in which the visitor becomes a resident of a social ghetto, learning what problems and difficulties are posed by living there.

Also in 2005, preparations were made for the Likviduj! Tour. PIN approached the band Gulo čar, and prepared events in twenty Czech cities, combining music, entertainment and a social message.

Financed by: Czech Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs, the Government Council for Romany Affairs, the European Social Fund, The City of Prague, EU Phare Programme, EU EQUAL Initiative, Karlovy Vary Region, Central Bohemia Region, MindShare.

SOCIAL WORK IN SLOVAKIA
 PIN has provided development aid to Roma communities in East Slovakia since 2004. Activities include a center for local job counseling, strategic plans for social development of towns and rural communities, the planning of community companies and the administration of a community center in Roškovice.

In 2005, seven centers for local job counseling were active, helping find work for the unemployed people in Roma villages. Staff of the centers look for job opportunities and mediate contact between the employer and the client. The program also includes running a database of job applicants and the jobs available.

In 2005, PIN collaborated in drafting strategic plans for social development in three regions. Strategies of development of several community companies were elaborated that provide employment for the local unemployed using local resources.

SOCIAL INCLUSION AND DISCRIMINATION

POLIS

Since 2005, PIN's branch offices in Pilsen, Ústí nad Labem and Bílina have provided complex social services and counseling for people in danger of becoming socially excluded, and for institutions which work or come into contact with these individuals. The POLIS project interconnects the services of civil servants, teachers, police officers, social workers, city councilors and others. The project aims to facilitate cooperation between these people in order to implement non-discriminatory measures that help the socially disadvantaged integrate in the community, receive education or training and succeed in the labor market.

IT HURTS AND IT DOESN'T – TESTIMONIES OF ROMA WW II SURVIVORS

In 2005, PIN published 1 200 copies of It Hurts and It Doesn't: Memories of Roma during the war and after. The publication of the book, containing eight personal testimonies, brings to a close PIN projects to assist Roma victims claim compensation for Nazi atrocities, begun in 2001.

RESEARCH AND MONITORING

The European Monitoring Center based in Vienna coordinates the activities of the European network for the monitoring of racism and xenophobia (RAXEN). The network monitors the expressions of racism, xenophobia, Islamophobia and anti-Semitism in EU countries. As of 2004, PIN has functioned as RAXEN's national center for the Czech Republic, and compiled requested national reports in 2005.

PIN staff were also involved in the compilation of the following reports in 2005: Inquiry in the Obstacles to Employment of the Roma in the Czech Republic, Survey of Types of Criminal Offences of the Socially Segregated Roma Community in the Ústí Region and the Study of the Situation of Socially Excluded Romany Enclaves in the Central Bohemia Region.

VARIANTS

VARIANTS

The Variants educational program implements intercultural education (IE), and global development education (GDE) in the Czech educational system.

In April 2005, the two-and-a-half year long first phase of Variants came to a close. In the course of the phase’s duration, ten two-day IE seminars for secondary school teachers were held, and two manuals on IE for secondary school teachers, an anthology of texts on implementing IE distributed to all primary schools in the Czech Republic and the IE reader and textbook for students of teaching colleges were published.

PRIMARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Variants was created in response to reforms of the Czech educational system that require that schools frame their own educational programs, in place of a set state curriculum. A compulsory part of these programs is the inclusion of interdisciplinary and cross-curricular topics – multicultural and global education among them.

ADULT EDUCATION

Civil servants, the police and representatives of labor offices constitute a specific target audience for Variants. The program targets urban areas and addresses the issue of social exclusion, acting to support PIN field social workers.

WEBSITE

In 2005, the educational website www.varianty.cz underwent a radical reorganization. Apart from information on courses and publications, the website now offers key terms, texts and teaching materials on IE and GDE.

INFORMATION PROJECTS & THE CLUB OF FRIENDS

Providing information and building public awareness have been important objectives since PIN's creation in 1992. Through long-term cooperation with the Czech media, special supplements, features and interviews on TV, radio and print media, PIN has contributed to a rise in awareness in Czech society of crisis situations, development, human rights issues and migration.

CAMPAIGNS

PIN launches public campaigns at times of disaster, and also to attract attention to social issues that require long-term, sustainable solutions. In 2005, PIN launched the SOS Sri Lanka and SOS Pakistan public collections. PIN also coordinated the Let's Build a School in Africa campaign, focused on providing access to quality education in Ethiopia, and the Likviduj! campaign, aimed at raising public awareness about problems of social exclusion and Czech ghettos.

INFORMATION PROJECTS

In 2005, PIN administered projects aimed at providing the public with in-depth information about development, global issues and migration. PIN prepared and published 12 four-page supplements in nationwide and regional dailies and weeklies, informing the public about the One World Film Festival, Czech development assistance and immigrant communities in the Czech Republic and other related topics.

INFOSERVICE

For the past five years, PIN operated the Infoservice website hosting articles, interviews and reports about crisis regions, totalitarian regimes, relief, development and social and migration issues, both in the wider world and the Czech Republic. In 2005, the website had on average one thousand visits per day, and PIN also provided four thousand people with a weekly e-mail brief.

Financed by: Open Society Fund Praha, NROS, the British Embassy

CLUB OF FRIENDS

The PIN Club of Friends was established in 2003 to support specific efforts of People In Need. The Club is a way for individual supporters to regularly contribute to the efforts PIN is making to ease the lives of those in need around the world. Membership in the Club offers a way to impact crisis situations and support those who struggle for human rights and democracy worldwide. It also gives the Friends an opportunity to stay informed about PIN projects via the Club's biannual bulletin and regular e-mail updates.

Fifty percent of contributions made are used to fund the PIN fast reaction humanitarian aid fund. Twenty-five percent of contributions are used for direct support to democratic activists engaged in the struggle for human rights, and twenty-five percent are used for PIN's organizational growth.

At the end of 2005, more than 1500 people had joined the Club of Friends, contributing almost EUR 144 000. PIN thanks all of the members of the Club of Friends and greatly appreciates their trust.
